

Native Plants

with Barbara Gregerson

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY
EXTENSION

Wednesday—May 22, 2024

11:00 am—12:30 pm

Research shows that native species are more adept at fostering biodiversity, protecting local habitat and attracting wildlife - including ever-important pollinators. The deep roots of native plants means they need less maintenance, requiring less watering in the hot summer months and no need for fertilizer or chemicals to thrive, resulting in reduced negative environmental impacts.

Join us at the library as we learn more about our native plants and their importance in our everyday lives.

Pinckney Community Public Library
125 Putman Street, Pinckney, MI 48169
734-878-3888, www.pinckneylibrary.org